Good morning, it's Rainie from the SEAL Team, back with you all for Seal Summary Friday.

People have often said that a picture is worth a thousand words. But if you put away some time to look at some of them, you can see that it's worth even more. Photos capture the essence of life and its beauty. Without photos, our lives would be very different. This is why May is National Photography Month. Photos can be inspirational, uplifting and can be used as symbols to represent what one wants to express. This holiday is all about praising the art of photography and its impact on our everyday lives, as well as celebrating it by continuing to take photos to look back on in the future. Before photographs were a thing, people used paintings instead. But now, with the modern technology we have today, every photo we take can be looked back upon to cherish the past. We get to have the incredible opportunity to preserve a memory forever, with just one singular picture, no words.

As we celebrate National Photography Month, let us also remember that with great power comes great responsibility. Every photo we take has the potential to impact others, so we must be mindful of the message we are conveying. Let us use photography as a tool to spread love, kindness, and positivity, rather than hate or negativity. Let's capture moments that bring joy, inspire others, and foster a sense of community. Remember, the art of photography goes beyond the technicalities of taking a good photo. It's about capturing the essence of life and using it to create a better world.

Thanks for listening have a Framed Memory Friday 😊
